Some cars need very few words. This 1967 Aston Martin DB6 Volante LHD is definitely one of them. Let the name speak for itself: - Aston Martin: the British luxury sports car manufacturer par excellence. - DB6: considered by aficionados to be the last real Aston Martin. - Volante: what better way to enjoy a four-litre straight six than in an open four-seater? - LHD: with just ten left-hand drive DB6 Volantes built (of a total of 140 Volantes), this is a rare opportunity! Add to this: - a full restoration to concours condition, with particular attention to the engine rebuild; - a very appealing and original color combination, Goodwood Green over natural leather; - a manual ZF 5-speed gearbox; - an original "Coolaire" air-conditioning making this car one of only four LHD manual DB6 Volante's with air-conditioning; - numerous other original options, such as a tonneau cover, double horns, a limited slip differential and an electric antenna; - and a heritage certificate confirming the car's authenticity and its chassis and engine number! What more can you ask for?
