Lancia Appia Sport Zagato 1961 LHD Chassis: 812051111 Isn't it lovely to see how this short wheelbase Appia Sport Zagato is the perfect little sister of the Aston Martin DB4 GT Zagato? Logic, they were both designed by Ercole Spada! For most classic car enthusiasts, me included, the DB 4 GT Zagato is now totally out of reach. The Lancia Appia Sport Zagato on the contrary... This Appia SWB Sport Zagato, initially sold new in Belgium, is one of the only 200 examples produced on the shorter wheelbase of 2350 mm, of which practically all had a rather active racing history. It is very obvious that also this Appia Sport Zagato was raced during her previous life. Testimony for this are the tuned engine with big Weber 36 carburettor, the period bucket seats, the roll-cage, etc... The totally polished aluminium body not only looks sexy but also proves there is no corrosion anywhere, nor serious structural damage to this Appia Sport Zagato. Comes with actual Italian registration documents and a nice history file. This rare sports-racing Coupé maybe be little but has great provenance and looks.
